
Mindanao State University: A Preliminary Bibliography

Marianita D. Dablio

Mindanao State University has apparently evolved into a complex institution of higher learning, whose original charter has grounded it on the goal of national integration. Its pioneering years has envisioned the university as a "bold experiment in higher education." This was succeeded by a major transformation as the university marched "on the threshold of the second decade." The idea of the university as a social laboratory echoed on campus and continued for some time. Almost a generation later, it was referred to as the "premier institution in the South."

The chronicler of the university holds the serious task of weaving together these visions. His observations will probably begin with posing such basic questions as: what has been written in, by, and about the university? More than twenty-five years since its foundation, there has not been a listing of what has been found out to be a growing body of materials about the university. Dr. Mamitua Saber has noted the need for an MSUiana (similar to Filipiniana). This effort serves as an initial response to that call.

This bibliography commences an attempt to put together resources, - by, about and in the university. Through a preliminary bibliography, it tries to initiate a vital process that would lead towards forming a database or information base about the university. The bibliography serves as a starting point to generate a more comprehensive body of literature about the university.

The present contribution is by no means complete. The bibliography consists of the following areas, more organized by types of materials: 1) Republic Acts and Presidential decrees; 2) annual reports and other reports; 3) bulletin of information, catalogs, brochures and related types of materials; 4) periodical articles and articles in monographs; 5) periodicals; 6) theses, dissertations, seminar papers and related resources; 7) seminar-workshops, conferences, etc. 8) by colleges, academic and other administrative units; 9) development plans, project proposals and reports 10) papers read, speeches delivered, etc.

It has not been the intent of the author to omit other significant resources. The effort looks forward to including them in the future. In one way, attempts such as this work can be "participatory."
